FEBRUARY'S SAFETY SUPERHEROS

It honestly surprised me. it makes me feel good to know when nobody is watching that I am doing the right thing even when I feel like no one is watching. And knowing I'm keeping myself and others around me safe is the number One priority.

*Daniel Rice
A-Shift Maintenance*

It means that I get to come home to my family everyday, also keeping my work family safe and they get to go home everyday to their family's.

My favorite thing about being the safety super hero is I get to help set the example. Plus the parking.

*Megan Parson
C-Shift Sheetline*

Being a safety superhero to me means that I got to help a fellow co-worker make it home safe to their family. By everyone helping each other out, we can make sure everyone stays safe and makes it home to their loved ones. All it takes is one accident and it can change not only that persons life but also the ones they care about.

Group Project:

Task: Peeling at prep stations while clamp trucks are in the area.
Solution:?

Mark:

Task: Position roll-on belts using roll pushers
Solution: Tried adding the flags to the roll pushers; the welds have broken off. Looking into a different fit.

Josh:

Task: Fill/replace dunnage on dunnage racks. (Middle and Bottom)
Solution: Dan and Mark asked about making a separate dunnage rack area for the top and bottom to help relieve someone from walking back and forth.

Aleks:

Task: Threading web through the triple stack
Solution: Grabber has been being used, and seems to be helping with not standing on the railing. Still need sign-offs from the shifts.

Eugene:

Task: Changing out strapping on banders.
Solution: The pallet jack is here; custom craft is designing the platform for the pallet jack. ETA- 3 Weeks

Task: Cutting Quality on Sheetline

Solution: A table and equipment have been added to the bottom stacker area. Waiting for completion from Eugene.

John Jenner

Task: Pedestrian and forklift traffic, on the dock floor and walking to the office.
Solution: SafeT light is here along with the railing. Waiting for the electrician to wire for the safeT light.
